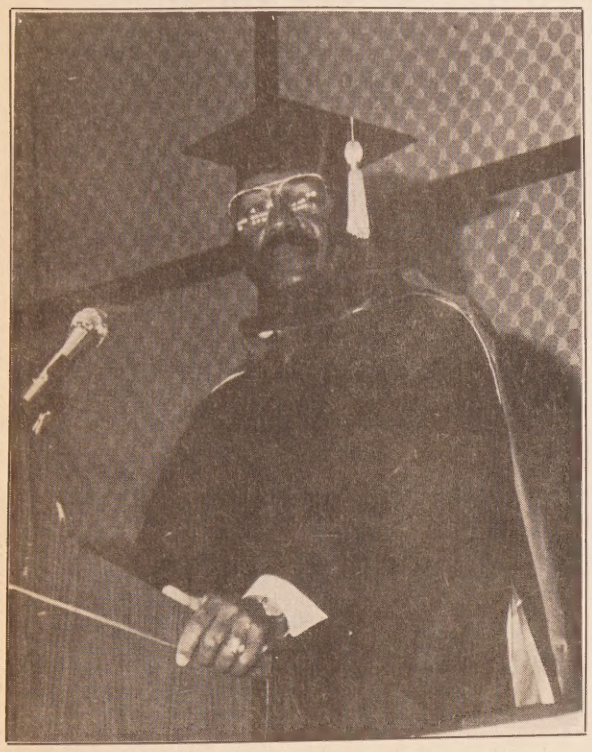
Senator George Fleeming Receives Doctor Of Law Degree.



SEATTLE -- Senator George Fleming donned the garb of academia last Sunday, to receive an honorary Doctor of Law degree, and to challenge City University graduates to help others along the way on their personal road to success.

The event was the commencement of some 600 graduates of the class of 1985 of City University of Bellevue. Students in their 30's and 40's--usually with jobs and families to contend with--avail themselves of the opportunity to earn a college education during early morning or late evening class schedules.

For Fleming, the Senator from Seattle's 37th District, the honorary Doctor of Laws Degree brought another milestone in a career that has taken him from a childhood in a still-segregated south, to a seven-year career in collegiate and professional football, to a 17-year career in elective politics and a management post in industry.

Fleming is the top ranking black elected official in Washington State. As Senate Democratic Caucus chairman he holds one of two top leadership positions in the Senate.

Fleming reminded the graduating class of the extraordinary effort they expended to earn their bachelor or master degrees by going to morning and night school.

"City University has given you non-traditional students a chance to reach upwards towards leadership roles in both the public and private sector," Fleming said.

He told them they have to make a choice to "simply take advantage of your own opportunities, or provide leadership in extending opportunities to others."

Fleming related when he was a youth growing up in the still-segregated south, "I would never have been able to reach upwards if others had not first reached out to me.

"And I don't just mean people I have known personally, I mean also the John F. Kennedy's, the Martin Luther King's, and every other leader who has helped America to become more and more a land of opportunity," Fleming said.

"These leaders not only climbed to national prominence they lifted as they climbed; they reached out, so that others, like myself, could have a chance to reach upwards.

The honorary Doctorate was awarded to Fleming because of his "recognition as a towering champion of civil liberties and human rights," according to the document.

"His legislative career...has been characterized by leadership of every substantive governmental and civic initiative to empower the individual, assure social justice and reinvigorate our Bill of Rights."

City University awarded a Doctor of Letters degree to 8th District congressman Rod Chandler, who was unable to attend the commencement ceremony.

Chief Satiacum.

One night I was the only man present in the camp with women and children, when gun-carrying fisheries officers arrived to sieze a boat. I had a shotgun, but it was an old relic--one of the old kind that you pull the handle back--but it didn't have any shells or anything.

I told them they were on Indian land, to leave the boat and get out of there.They called for reinforcements and soon about fifty armed policemen arrived. One of them secretly whispered a warning to me to be very careful of what I did.

The police surrounded me. I thought for sure they were going to blow me away and that was why I had been warned, but I stood my ground. I told them they had no authority to be on our land or to interfere with our fishing or to touch our equipment. They backed down and left.

As time went on more of our people participated in the fishing war. Native Indian people came from distant Tribes to support us. As our movement gained momentum, so did the opposition increase.

By September, 1965, the assaults on our fishing camp were becoming really intense. Our people began to show signs of stress. Vigilante terrorist groups, sports fishermen and Klu Klux Klan members were increasing in numbers, surrounding and threatening our camp and people. You could hear rifle shots from the banks and see the flashes on the water. Most of the gunfire was at random to terrify us, but the sounds of gunfire were a continual reminder that our lives were always in danger.

One night I was setting my net out to fish when a sudden squall lifted the boat in a jerking motion. I was thrown off balance. Just at that moment a bullet hit the side of my boat. If it had not been for that sudden squall, the sniper would have killed me. The shot came from the St. Regis Pulp mill about 200 yards away. The sniper had to be an expert marksman to use that rifle scope so accurately in the dark. My wife Su'Zan and my brother, who were watching from the opposite river bank immediately drove around to the mill where the shot came from. They were given the run-around from the security guard on duty. We reported this incident to the police, but there never was an investigation, nor did they ever respond to our complaint.

On two other occasions I was chased by vigilante type terrorists in high-powered boats. I was in a small skiff both times. The shots were precariously close. Both times it was low tide and it is difficult to tell how deep the water is if you are not familiar with the area. My life-long experience on the Puyallup River saved my life because I was able to skillfully maneuver my skiff to escape. On both occasions the other boats ran aground.

In August, 1970 we were at the fishing camp on the Puyallup River. There were tepees and other living facilities. About 35 people were camping there. Some of the

As people across the country make plans and pack their suitcases for vacation, Tacoma Police Director Dean Phillips urges folks to make plans to protect their homes from the burglar in their absence as well. The Tacoma Police Crime Prevention Unit advises people follow these simple steps to increase their chances of returning from vacation to an undisturbed home:

- Have a trusted neighbor pick up your paper and mail daily. Don't allow papers to accumlate on your doorstep and broadcast your absence. Even though you may trust your newspaper carrier, he may have less-trustworthy friends who accompany him on his route and notice that your paper has been temporarily stopped for vacation.

-Have the same trusted neighbor come into your house to periodically change the position of your drapes.

- Have a few lights set on timers to come on at dusk and off at dawn. Include a porchlight if possible. Lights which are left burning around the clock make it look like the residents are gone.

- If you have an alarm system, be sure that a trusted neighbor has access to the system in event of a false alarm. Leave your location and a number where you can be reached. Encourage neighbors to report suspicious activity.

- Make sure all property in your home has been engraved with your driver's license number. After it has been engraved, display the "Operation I.D." sticker prominently in doors or windows where forced entry is most likely to be made. (These can be obtained from the Crime Prevention Unit.)

- Replace old, insecure locks with quality deadbolt locks. Use 3 inch screws to secure strike plates. Pin windows or install window locks to prevent windows from being slid open or lifted out of their tracks. The same may be done for sliding glass doors. Adjust the tracks of windows and sliding doors to reduce the amount of up and down movement. Insert machine screws in the track, if necessary, to reduce the play. Dowel rods placed in the window or door only prevent sideways movement.

If you take a vacation to stay at home and work around the house, use some of your time to make your home more secure. Then enjoy your time away knowing that you've done everything you can to thwart the burglar.

Indian Chief Bob Satiacum Own Story Continues

Satiacum

Continue From Last Week.

Every night we went out there, we put our lives on the line. We were attacked by armed railroad police, fishery officers, Pierce county police and armed vigilantes who were sports fishermen who said we were going to deplete the fish. By-standers, who were just ordinary citizens, shouted obscene threats and racist remarks at us.

That is all history. If you were to ask me how many times we were victims of brutality or how many times we were arrested, I could not tell. But some of the most outstanding moments of terror are engraved in my memory.

The Supreme Court of the State of Washington in 1957 upheld the judgment of 1954 by jury trail. From then on we were basically left alone until 1963 when the State came back at me and the Tribe with a civil action, a restraining order to keep us from fishing, on behalf of conservation.

In the meantime, from 1957 to 1963, other Tribal members had begun to exercise their fishing rights.

After 1963 I went before the United States Supreme Court twice. The courts ruled we had Treaty rights to fish, but the State had the right to regulate conservation, which was a victory for them because their argument was conservation. We held a demonstration with the Puyallup Tribe and burnt the 18-page document page by page on June 13, 1968.

The Washington State media was tremendously biased against our people in their coverage, so to get outside publicity and to stop their propaganda against us, we contacted the actor Marlon Brando in March of 1964. He came out fishing with us. Marlon was in my boat on the Puyallup River when we were arrested and sent to jail, then turned loose shortly after. But the publicity helped our cause. Dick Gregory, the Black comedian, and other celebrities came and demonstrated with us also.

Although we began to win the battle of the propaganda, the struggle was becoming more violent. We just kept fishing, didn't quit, wouldn't quit. The vigilantes turned it into a shooting war...We had a shooting war down on the Puyallup River that so easily could have turned into a blood-bath with our people the victims.

I created a fishing camp to protect our fishermen.

NOW the days of David drew nigh that he should die and he charged Solomon his son, saying,

I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and shew theyself a man;

And keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies, as it is written in thelaw of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself:

That the Lord may continue his word which he spake concerning me, saying, If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel.

Moeover thou knowest also what Joab the son of Zeruiah did to me, and what he did to the two captains of the hosts of Israel, unto Abner the son of Ner, and unto Amasa the son of Jether, whom he slew, and shed the blood of war in peace, and put the blood of war upon his girdle that was about his loins, and in his shoes that were on his feet.

Do therefore according to thy wisdom, and let not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace.

But shew kindness unto the sons of Barzillai the Gileadite, and let them be of those that eat at the table: for so they came to me when I fled because of Absalom thy brother.

And, behold, thou hast with thee Shimei the son of Gera, a Benjamite of Bahurim, which cursed me with a grievous curse in the day when I went to Mahanaim: but he came down to meet me at Jordan, and I sware to him by the Lord, saying, I will not put thee to death with the sword.

Now therefore hold him not guiltless: for thou ar a wise man, and knowest what thou oughtest to do unto him; but his hoar head bring thou down to the grave with blood.

So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David.

And the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years: seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three year reigned he in Jerusalem.

Then sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father; and his kingdom was established greatly.

And Adonijah the son of Haggith came to Bathsheba the mother of Solomon. And she said, Comest thou peaceably? And he said, Peaceably.

He said moreover, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And she said, Say on.

And he said, Thou knowest that the kingdom was mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me, that I should reign: howbeit the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's: for it was his from the Lord.

And now I ask one petition of thee, deny me not. And she said unto him, Say on.

And he said, Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the king, (for he will not say thee nay,) that he give me Abishag the Shunammite to wife.

And Bathsheba said, Well; I will speak for thee unto the king.

Bathsheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to speak unto him for Adonijah. And the king rose up to meet her, and bowed himself unto her, and sat down on his throne, and caused a seat to be set for the king's mother; and she sat on his right hand.

"The Doctors Prescription

All Things For Good

"We know that all things work together for good." Here is truth in operation ,Here is an axiom which will work in all eventualities of life. It will work anywhere, anytime. Paul is not saying that everything is good. Sin, death,sorrow, sickness, and poverty are not good. Infantile paralysis, cancer, and war are not good, and we are not asked to believe that they are good. Our reason would not allow us to do so. But somehow, as we shall see, for those who love God, all the events of life work together for good. As the flower can grow from mud, as preachers can come from drunkards' homes, as the oyster can produce the pearl, so out of despair and evil, good can come.

We know that all things work together for good." Had Paul said "some things" or "a few things work together for good." It would not bother us much because we all recognize that some of the things in life work together for good. But when he said "All Things", he was speaking from his own personal experience. Thinking about his life, his persecutions, and his problems, he still said, "It has all worked together for good.

"We know that all things work together for good." The Greek word is sunergie. The ingredients in medicine work together. The pharmacist takes a bit of medicine over here which would not in itself effect a cure and another bit of medicine over there which in itself would not effect a cure and work them together. They then effect the cure. All Things - the sunshine and the darkness, the laughter and the tears, the problems and the heartaches - work together for good. The events which are not good in themselves combine with other events to make it right. Robinson Crusoe said, "How strange a checkerboard of providence is the life of man."

"All things work together for good." It does not say "Work together for pleasure and laughter." God does not promise that we shall go through life with unending pleasure. He says that it works together for our good. God does not look for our pleasure any more than the physician does for his patient. The physician does not give us medicine to make us happy but to effect a cure. Sometimes the medicine or treatment hurts, but you know this is best because of the cure that is effected. God does that which is for our best interest. All things work together for our best interest, for our ultimate good. (See II Cor. 4:17; Jas. 1:4; Heb. 4:11). But this involves our response to God's leadership. (c) This is a limited promise. There is no promise here for those who have rejected Christ. People throw these words around flippantly, "Everything works out all rights." But this is not a general promise to humanity. This is a specific promise only to Christians. "To them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose" is what the Bible says. This world promise is contingent upon our attitude toward God. For the child of God there is the assurance that he will be the victor over the circumstances of life or under them.

This involves life after death which is why it involves the Christian faith. There will come a time when all things be proved to have been good for us. "In that day" said Christ, "ye shall ask me nothing." We are going to be satisfied with the good that has been produced, and we shall say at the throne of heaven, "It was good."

Want To Try Food Dehydration.

Do you know how to can and want to try something new? How about food dehydration? Drying food is one of the oldest methods of food preservation and today more and more people are interested in this method, according to Olga Fuste', Washington State University's Pierce County Extension Home Economist.

This method offers several advantages such as reduced storage space for the preserved product, no refrigeration is required and the final product adapts itself very well to the outdoor lifestyle common in this area. Want to learn more about it? Then plan to attend a food dehydration workshop on July 30, 1985, 1:00-3:00 p.m. at the Gig Harbor Grange.

Jockey Jack Rides In June, Shown Here With The Late Ruth Brown And Joe Louis.

JOCKEY JACK RIDES IN JUNE--In an historic shot taken when he was "riding" the airwaves as "Jokey Jack"--the sure-fire winner on Cincinnati's WCIN radio, Black music trade newsletter publisher Jack Gibson provides the 'mount' for singer Ruth Brown and former world heavyweight boxing champ Joe Louis, both now deceased. The one-man host of Jack the Rappr's "Family Affair" Black music and radio convention, set for August at the Marriott Marquis Hotel in Atlanta, is asking Blacks in America to send ideas, comments and suggestions on what Black entertainers and Black radio can do to help those who are being crippled by an unjust and racist nation. Write to "Working On A Plan", Jack the Rapper, Post Office Box 2027, Orlando, Florida 32802.--KNS PHOTO

ORLANDO, Florida--(KNS)--"Jockey Jack" Gibson, 65-year-old publisher of "Jack the Rapper," the nation's oldest Black music trade newsletter, is generally a very happy guy. He is known and revered in many parts of the world, and he is loved and respected in high places in the Black radio and music arena.

Gibson, born in Chicago and one of the original black disc jockeys in America, is a married man with five grandchildren. He is considered to be an authority on Black radio and his publication, nicknamed "The Mello Yello" because of its loud, goldenrod cover and the "laid-back" status of the nearly 7,000 industry movers and shakers who read it each week, has spawned for him the largest Black music and radio convention in the world.

But the month of June always sends the adrenalin coursing through the veins of Jack the Rapper, as he is known by those in the industry, and he absolutely glows at the thought that, once again, national attention was focused on such an important part of our heritage: music.

"Black music should be celebrated every month of the year," said the fiesty publisher, who is known as much for the praise he gives to socially-conscious entertainers and radio personalities as he is for the lambasting he applies with great flourish and tenacity as he tells it like it t-i-s is!

"This will be at the very top of my agenda this year when more than 2,000 of the nation's leaders in Black music and Black radio gather at the Family Affair '85 in Atlanta in August," he said, "because with the power and influence of Black radio and the resourcefulness of Black entertainers, I know that we can work on the plan that actor Ossie Davis called for in a passion-filled speech many years ago at a Congressional Black Caucus dinner. We can dare to be different than we are."

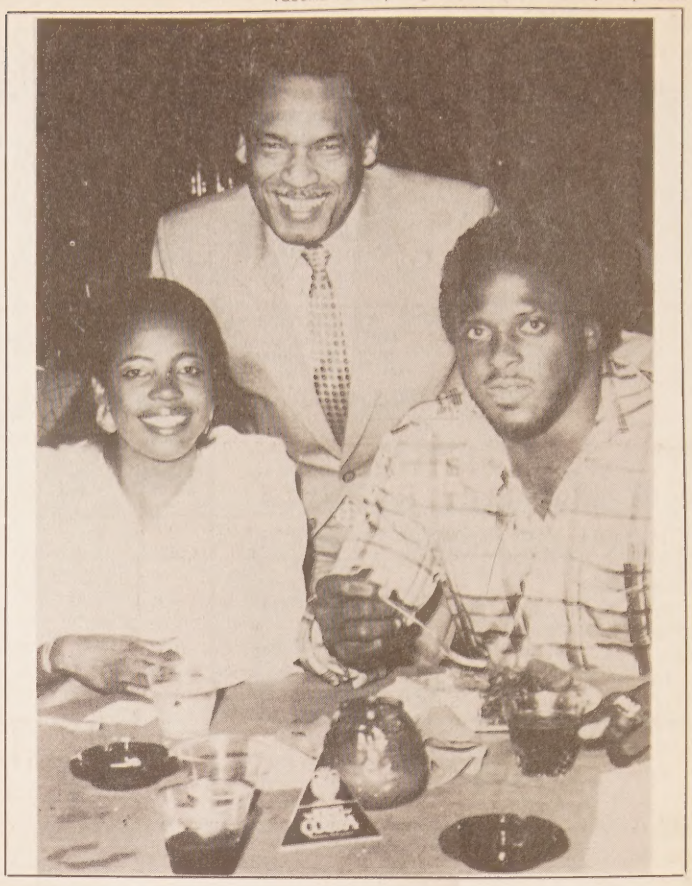
Letters are pouring in from readers of Black publications all over the nation in response to Jack Gibson's plea for help. Readers were asked to send information abouat programs, projects and activities that are successful in the community but do not have proper funding for expansion. He asked readers to supply him with ideas and suggestions about what entertainers can do here in America to help alleviate the problems we have at home.

"We have no quarrel with people who give of their time and talent to worthy causes," Gibson said, "and we applauded the group effort that resulted in a world-wide hit record for Black people in Ethiopia. But I am reminded of the adage 'Charity begins at home,' and I know there are many, many poor people here in America--of all races and colors--who need more of a helping hand than they are getting from the government.

Convention theme this year is "Dare to Be Different" and a record number of registrants is expected. In addition to lavish that play host to the royally-treated disc jockeys, Family Affair conventions are filled with educational workshops, informative seminars and heated panel discussions touching upon subjects of great interest to conference attendees. Family Affair '85 is the ninth consecutive meeting of musical minds.

"Because we know the compassion that many top-rated stars feel for their brothers and sisters who are less fortunate, and because we know that Black radio personalities are among the most energetic, creative and resourceful people in the world," Gibson said, "we are very confident that a movement will be created at this convention that will result in a concrete, workable plan to attack the many problems that face us in America today."

Readers wishing to work on this plan are invited to send all comments, ideas and suggestions to: "Working On A Plan", Jack the Rapper, Post Office Box 2027, Orlando, Florida 32802.



GOOD VIBRATIONS--Chico C. Norwood (l.), sportscaster with radio station KDAY and Los Angeles Raiders' offensive lineman Henry Lawrence, were ecstatic when they tasted the Curtis "C" Loaf of pre-cleaned, pre-cooked chitterlings at the recent "Chitlins on China" party hosted by Ed Lara (c.), of Westside Distributors, Lou Montgomery and Walter Hyatt, co-francisees for Southern California of the unique new product. A crowd of nearly 200 people enjoyed the taste of the Curtis "C" Loaf and several pounds of the product were sold to party-goers who refused to leave the Regency West without them. THE PUBLIC IS INVITED TO ATTEND

"Lotto" Game Review Underway.

Should the Washington State Lottery change its almost-year-old "Lotto" game to make it more interesting and fun? Would the public like to see higher jackpot prizes?

Lottery Director Mary Faulk would like to know the public's opinion of "Lotto," which will be a year old on July 15th. "There has been no decision made to change Lotto," Faulk emphasized, "but we owe it to our players and agents to provide the best-possible games that will be fun and interesting."

Numerous game variables are being studied. Computer models have been developed to test the potential impacts of:

- Expanding the game matrix (to six of 42 or 44 numbers, instead of present six of 40 for a jackpot win) to allow larger jackpots to build;

- Conducting multiple weekly drawings on the same game, which would provide palyers with more opportunities to play;

- Adding a game with different odds, thus offering players a choice of Lotto games with varying jackpots and chances of winning.

Faulk said the Lottery plans to do formal market research while also welcoming general player feedback. "We will not decide whether to change the Lotto game until we have gathered and reviewed both the formal research and the informal player opinion," she said.

Faulk encourages persons with comments or suggestions about Lotto to write to her, or to Dick Paulson, Lottery Public Relations, at 600 Park Village Plaza, 1200 Cooper Point Road S.W., Olympia, Washington 98502. Comments are aso welcomed at Lottery region offices in Everett, Seattle, Vancouver, Olympia, Spokane and Yakima.

Miller American Captures Stroll's Thunderfest.

DETROIT, MI -- An estimated crowd of over 350,000 watched as the Miller American piloted by Chip Hanauer took command of the final heat. Leading coming out of the first corner and holding off the charging Miss 7-Eleven and Steve Reynolds, the Miller American captured the Stroh's Thunderfest on the Detroit River. The Miller American, Miss Budweiser and the Miss 7-Eleven hit the line together closely followed by the Executone Telephone and the Oh Boy! Oberto. As the Miller American rounded the exit pin, first lap, second corner, Hanauer put his foot down and the red and white turbine led the field down the back stretch never looking back. The Miss Budweiser in land one lost a motor and pulled to the infield in lap one. The Miss 7-Eleven and Steve Reynolds gave a strong chase for five laps but could not catch the Miller American and Hanauer. The Executone Telephone and Scott Pierce held a solid third place until something let go in the engine and he coasted to a halt during lap four in the solid final heat and finished third. The Executone finished fourth, the Miss Budweiser finished fifth. Average speed for the final heat was 122.924. Hanauer and the Miller American ran 127.065 on lap one of the final. Miller American also ran the fastest lap of the day in head 2A at 130.435.

In earlier action, Heat 1A was won by the Miss 7-Eleven and Steve Reynolds at an average speed of 106.137. Miss Budweiser and the Oh Boy! Oberto ran deck to deck for five laps before the Bud nipped the Oberto at the finish line. Cellular One/Detroit, driven by Todd Yarling, was fourth.

Heat 1B was rerun after the Miller American went dead in the fourth turn prior to the start of the heat. In the restart, Executone Telephone and Scott Pierce led from start to finish to capture the heat victory. American Speedy Printing and Andy Coker finished second.

S T. J O H N 1

IN the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

The same was in the beginning with God.

All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made.

In him was life; and the life was the light of men.

And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe.

He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light.

That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name:

Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

We welcome news of your church and civic events.

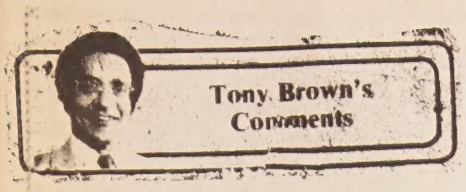
For The Best In State, Local And National News Read The FACTS



Face The Facts, Black America.

Time magazine did Black America a great service. It told the truth.

And the truth, you've heard, will set you free. In this case, it will literally free Blacks from the excess baggage of self-denial and self-inflicted abuse.

You've also heard that the truth is often not pretty. In a special issue on immigrants, Time surveyed the landscape of new-comers and assessed their Americanization.

Asians, for example, "are excelling in school, achieving on the job and otherwise making it in America." Hispanics, time said, "are having an impact form the Southwest to the Northeast."

"With a mixture of animosity and admiration, a long-impoverished minority watches as a new wave leaves them behind," is the description Time reserved for African-Americans.

Since "the first slave ships" 360 years ago, Blacks have watched wave after wave of new immigrants surpass them, the article continued. First, it was the Germans, Irish, Jews and Italians.

Racism has been used to explain that phenomenon. Now West Indian Blacks and Africans, 10 percent of the new immigrants, "have surpasse the living standard of native American Blacks."

Racism will not explain that, but a unified culture will. West Indians and Africans help West Indians and Africans. Black Americans have been acculterated to help Whites and mistrust one another.

The pattern is conspicuous in Harlem where, according to Time "tidy Korean shops..now dominate the thoroughfare." Cubans in Miami have taken "over what were once bastions of Black business."

And, of course, African-Americans across the country have adopted a favored non-Black ethnic group to make rich. In Detroit, the Arabs supply Blacks' food and liquor needs with a chain of supermarkets and convenience stores.

In Harlem, the Koreans now own a third of the stores on 125th Street. At one time it was called "Soul" Street; now it can be referred to "Seoul" Street.

"In 1960 Blacks owned 25 perent of the gas stations in Dade County (Miami). By 1979 they had ony 9 percent, while the percentage of Hispanic-owned stations grew from 12 percent to 48 percent. The average income of a Hispanic business in Dade County is now $84,000, almost twice that of a Black business."

How are some Blacks reacting to this humiliating course of events? In Harlem, they want to run Koreans out; in Miami, they blame the Cubans and Haitians for working for the legal minimum wage; and in Houston, where the Indochinese run ma and pa stores in Black neighborhoods, African-Americans buy in wonderment at the efficiency of these Asians.

These new immigrants learned 5,000 miles away that the Black American are a rich cultural market that has been trained to behave as a "poor minority."

While all other groups aspire to equality, Blacks cling to an unstable political agenda that services the few at the top. Equality comes to other groups that share their income with members of their group. And, conversely, evades those who don't.

Success comes to Asian-Americans, European-Americans and to African-Americans from the West Indies and Africa. But not to native Americans who are descended from Africans.

Many of us have organized against self-defeating pattern. We are organizing Buy Freedom Month in October when we will "spend-in" with Black businesses and create jobs for ourselves.

Black businesses will advertise discounts and courtesy. together, and only together, can we reverse this 360-year pattern of economic slavery. Send me .88 cents in stamps (1501 Broadway, Sutie 2014, New York, NY 10036) and I'll send you the details on how you can help.

Blaming the Koreans, Indochinese, Arabs and cubans won't help. Neither will calling Asiatics "chinks" and "gooks" or beating up the Laotians in Philadelphia.

It's us--not them. Get a copy of this Time issue and take your medicine.

It'll make you feel better. And remember, Buy Freedom Month is coming.

Black Elderly Hit By Budget Plans.

Congress is considering plans to reduce the massive deficit by capping social security benefits, perhaps through a freeze on the cost of living increase that's pegged to the inflation rate.

Such a freeze could drop half a million older Americans below the poverty line. Supporters of a freeze or other benefit limitations say the aged poor would not be hurt because they'd qualify for SSI (Supplemental Security Income), but that's highly doubtful.

To qualify for SSI, older citizens must strip themselves of virtually all their assets, and SSI benefits are far too low to provide a decent minimum living standard. And forcing people to rely on SSI means moving them from relieance on social security -- to which they've contributed their earnings all their working lives -- to a means-tested welfare program.

The trend to place a cap on social security benefits derives in part from the myth that the elderly are better off than the rest of us. Some of them may be, but older people still have the highest poverty rates of all adults over the age of 25.

About a fourth of all people over age 65 are poor or near poor. Among blacks, the rates are far higher still -- almost half the black elderly are either in poverty or just above the poverty line.

Part of the myth of the well-to-do elderly is that older poeple don't really need their social security income -- they have income from other sources. But the average older citizen does depend on social security -- without it, he or she would be in big trouble.

Social Security makes up over three-fourths of the total income of elderly households with income of less than $9,000 a year. The less the total household income, the greater the importance of that social security check.

That annual cost of living increase is the only way many older people can keep up with the rising cost of living. Put a cap on it and they will have to reduce living standards that, in too many instances, are already far too low.

Older blacks and older women would be the two groups hit hardest by any tampering with social security benefit levels. Reducing the deficit is important, but doing it at the expense of older people in need is unconscionable.

Another popular idea to hold down the deficit is to cut Medicare and Medicaid costs. Older people have already seen their Medicare premiums rise sharply in recent years, and cuts have severely reduced access to health care by the poor and the elderly.

The aged poor would be hit hardest since they are most likely to require long-term care either in nursing homes or in community-based service settings, and Medicaid is the primary public source of support for long-term care.

So if Washington goes the route of further cuts in benefits for older people, it will force hundreds of thousands to sharply lower their living standards and live in poverty.

Like other planned spending reductions to lower the deficit, these cuts are unnecessary. Since the deficit is caused by runaway defense spending and the systematic shrinking of the tax base in recent years, it can be cut by lower defense spending and higher tax revenues.

Tackling the deficit by taking more from the most vulnerable sectors of our society is the wrong policy. It's another instance of the unfairness that has guided national policies for too long.

Congress should not be an accomplice in spreading more misery among older Americans in poverty. The goal of deficit reduction need not conflict with sensible policy choices, and with the need for government to be responsive to its citizens.

Defense Amendment Big Step Toward Parity

On Wednesday, June 26, the U.S. House of Representaives, by voice vote, approved a piece of legislation that marks a significant milestone in the continuing fight of Black Americans for economic parity in this country.

The legislation in question was my amendment making it mandatory for 10% of the $224 billion the House authorized for defense be "expended with small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals, historically Black colleges and universities, and other minority institutions."

The amendment was co-sponsored by my friend and colleague, Rep. John Conyers of Michigan.

Excerpts from my speech on the floor of the House urging passage of the amendment are quoted below.

"I have persistently expressed and consistently voted my belief that our defense spending is prioritized towards preparation for war rather than the promotion of peace. Our foreign policy is based more upon might than upon right, oriented more to domination rather than justice and prospertity in the world. Yet, since that major issue has been decided to the contrary, I raise now another wrong in the $224 billion defense authorization bill before us today.

Our defense spending has not been in the most efficient and economical manner, in terms of maximizing the value of dollars spent or creating jobs and building our domestic economy.

"...In this time of huge federal deficits, when every defense dollars is competing with domestic program dollars, economy is of great improtance...At a time when Black americans suffer unemployment hovering around 20%, (three times that of whites) and with that rate steadily increasing, and when Black-owned businesses are bankrupting at a rate higher than the overall rate of the awful depression of the 30s, some targeting of government procurement is essential.

"...It is well known that research funds provide substantial support for the top research universities in this country. It draws the top-notch staff, builds the institutional infrastructure, attracts the technicians, allows for the procurement of advanced research equipment. However of the $376 million spent in FY 1984 for university research, faculty development, and facilities and equipment, only $4 milion, or only 1%, went to historically Black colleges and universities.

"...The Department of Defense small business records show that only 2.2% of 1984 procurement dollars went to minority-owned businesses, less than $3 billion out of approximately $125 billion obligated. These records also reveal that in 1984, less than 1% of RDT&E money went to minority businesses, only $128 million out of $15.6 billion. This is outrageously unfair in the light of general population proportions, and even more egregious if you look at the statistics of those who are defending our country. Blacks comprise 19.6% of the armed forces, Hispanics 3.6%, and other minorities 4%. In other words, minorities acount for 26.7% of our armed forces."

I still believe that this country's foreign policy is threatening and one-sided and that our defense budget is bloated and draws needed dollars from more vital programs, and I shall continue to do everything in my power to help set things right.

Nevertheless, it is equally incumbent upon me, as a Black Congressman and a member of the Small Business Committee, to fight with equal vigor to bring parity to the expending of federal funds, whether they come out of the Defense Department or any other department of government.

Tax Reform In 85, By Senator Slade Gordon

The overriding goal of the Administration's tax reform proposal is to restructure the federal tax code so that families and individual wage-earners across America would benefit. The new tax code should:

-- be simpler and less confusing,

-- be fairer, so that all taxpayers pay their fair share of federal taxes, and

-- lower the income tax bills paid by a majority of all taxpayers.

A simpler federal tax code means less paperwork and less money spent on tax specialists by people who itemize. In fact, fewer people should have to itemize under any new system.

The Administration's proposal includes a return-free filing system that is a major step in the direction of simplicity. Under this system, nearly half of American taxpayers would not have to fill out a tax return each year. They would merely receive a bill or refund from the Internal Revenue Service.

A fairer tax code means that those who earn roughly the same income will pay roughly the same amount of federal taxes. One way of accomplishing this is to eliminate those "loopholes" - deductions, credits and exemptions - that benefit only a few at the expense of everyone else.

Both of these general goals - simplicity and fairness - will encourage respect for, and voluntary compliance with, our tax system. But, in addition to these goals, each of the tax reform proposals now on the table aims to reduce the tax burden on most families and individuals.

The Administration's plan would increase the amount of income a person can earn before beginning to pay taxes. It would raise the standard deduction from $2,000 to $2,900 for individual taxpayers, and from $3,400 to $4,000 for married couples filing jointly.

In addition, the President's plan would nearly double the amount of the personal and dependent exemptions. They would rise from $1,040 to $2,000 in 1985. The combination of these two specific proposals would be to shift the tax burden away from those at or below the poverty line.

The President's proposal makes one change that I find significant. Under current law, non-working spouses are allowed an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) contribution of only $250, while working spouses are allowed the full contribution of $2,000. This is clearly unfair to those families with only one wage-earner. The President's proposal would allow both spouses to contribute the maximum $2,000, regardless of their employment status. This is important for couples who want to save for their retirement years.

Finally, the President's proposal would change the balance of taxes paid by individuals and corporations. The President predicts that his plan would lower the average individual or family tax by 7 percent. Corporate taxes, on the other hand, would rise by about 9 percent.

Although the President's plan is a good starting point, there is at least one aspect of his proposal regarding families and individual taxpayers that is troubling. My concern is with the so-called "marrriage penalty." This penalty results when the combined income of two married people puts them into a higher tax bracket than if they were to file as individuals. They end up paying a higher tax rate on their income and incur a larger tax bill.

The marriage penalty is partially corrected with the joint return. Also, current law allows two-income married couples to have an additional deduction that helps compensate for the penalty. The President's proposal, however, repeals that deduction and recreates a marriage penalty. So, while the Administration's proposal represents an excellent and ambitious starting point for tax reform, this is an example of an area where Congress should make improvements.

Black And Jewish Organizations Unite On Jury Exclusion

The American Jewish Congress has joined with the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund in submitting an amicus brief to the U.S. Supreme Court requesting reversal of a ruling of the Kentucky Supreme Court that permitted the state to obtain an all-white jury by peremptorily challenging all four blacks on a panel.

A black defendant who was convicted of burglary by an all-white jury and sentenced to prison, James K. Batson, argued that he was entitled by the Constitution to a trial by a representative selection of people from the community. The Kentucky Attorney General insisted that "peremptory challenges should continue to be afforded to all parties in a jury trial without any limitation or examination by the trial court." The state court upheld this contention, which was appealed by the public defender.

According to the brief, "the misuse of peremptory challenges to exclude blacks from juries is a pervasive and pernicious practice. Its use has supplemented earlier and more obvious devices to prevent minorities participating in this most fundamental of democratic institutions."

The NAACP and the AJCongress contend that the practice of peremptory challenge violates the Sixth Amendment's guarantee of the right to trial by an impartial jury and the Fourteenth Amendment's guarantee of equal protection of the law.

Co-counsel on the brief were Charles Stephen Ralston of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. and Lois Waldman, acting director of the Commission on Law and Social Action of the American Jewish Congress. The American Jewish Committee was also on the brief.

Perry Como In Seattle For 1st Time.

It's hard to believe, but the man who had a hit in 1969 with a song called "Seattle" has never performed here. WHITE ROSE LTD. has set out to right that injustice and with great civic pride announces MR. COMO'S performances at the PARAMOUNT THEATER this July.

With the immensely popular "PERRY COMO" show to his credit and his string of 47 charted singles (including number ones with "Round and Round", "Hot Diggity", and "Catch a Falling Star"), PERRY COMO is matched only by Bing Crosby for his success in the 40's and 50's as a pop crooner. Generations of fans remember the gentle humor of his TV broadcasts and the sweet vocal caress that is his personal musical stamp.

To top off his Seattle appearances, THE RAY CHARLES SINGERS, who backed him on most of his hits, will be appearing with him. It promises to be a night of fond memories and a special treat for all those Seattle fans who have never seen him in person.

PERRY COMO will be appearing at the PARAMOUNT THEATER July 18, 19 and 20 at 8:00 p.m. and July 20 and 21 for matinee performances at 3:00 p.m. Tickets are available at all TICKETMASTER outlets or can be charged by phone at (206) 628-0888.

young men had guns, but this is not unusual in the United States where practially everyone has a gun. It's a leftover from the gun-toting days of the old wild west. It is a way of life there. Some of the guns the young men had were absurd. For example, there was a young Apache who came to support us. He carried around a huge cumbersome block-buster. Impressive, but inoperative.

Some of the young people put up a barricade and a sign saying "No trespassing, Indian land." This irritated the news media and the general public. The news media then began a campaign pandering to the prejudices of the ignorant. They ran headlines like, "Indian Armed Camp on the Puyallup River" which was printed August 13, 1970.

This was ludicrous to say the very least. The pitiful contrast of our people with their pathetic array of guns to protect themselves against the high-powered rifles of the sports fishermen, Klu Klux Klan, terrorists and the enforcement agencies was a tragic comedy. But the press kept inciting the public to act. They could not tolerate "an armed camp adjacent to a peaceful community."

I do not want to give the impression that I think all those policemen were villains, although there were many villains amongst them. I say this because my life was saved by some of those men of good will. A few days before the final assault on our fishing camp took place, I was warned of the assualt and that my life was in danger. Some concerned decent police officers had risked their jobs to get word to me. The scheme was that during the confusion of the assault I would be killed by snipers with high-powered rifles stationed on a bridge.

On previous occasions I had appealed to the U.S. Attorney Stan Pitkin for protection, but my requests were always ignored. Nevertheless I again appealed to him to give us protection from the danger of the impending assault. This time he said he would assign a U.S. Marshall for our protection. This is the procedure they used to protect the Black people from violence in the southern states during the 1960's protest marches for civil rights. If any violence errupts, the U.S. Marshall has the authority to call in the National Guards or the Army.

Ali

Ali was diagnosed last year as having a Parkinson's disease-like condition that slows his speech and his movements. Mrs. Ali, last year, embarked upon a singing, modeling and acting career of her own.

Asisha Ali, who claims she was married to Ali in an Islamic ceremony, filed a paternity suit against the former boxer earlier this year, seeking about $4,500 in monthly payments for the support of her ten-year-old daughter, who she claims Ali fathered.

Aaisha's attorney, Judith Forman, said her client and Ali never had a civil wedding ceremony and said the Islamic rite was performed in May of 1975 when the boxer was married to Belinda Boyd.

The divorce petition states that all community property, amassed during the eight-year marriage, has been disposed of pursuant to a written agreement. A public relations spokesperson for the couple said the dissolution was agreed to by both parties and that Ali and his wife are parting as friends.

"Both parties maintain the utmost admiration, love and respect for each other and their deep friendship remains intact," said the spokesperson.

Drivers License Fee To Go Up.

OLYMPIA -- Some driver license fee are going up beginning July 1, announced Licensing Director Theresa Anna Aragón. The fees were increased after approval by the legislature to avoid closure of more than two dozen driver license stations across the state.

"The basic driver license will remain at $14," according to Aragón. "But duplicate licenses, occupational licenses, and permits will go up."

Duplicate driver licenses, identification cards, and instruction permits will increase from $3.50 to $5.00. Instruction permits went from $3.50 to $5; agricultural permits from $2 to $3; identification cards from $3 to $4; photo license only from $1 to $2; and the examination fee from $3 to $7. An occupational license will now cost $25 instead of $10, and a copy of the driver record will cost $3.50 instead of $1.50.

A $3 renewal fee will be charged to persons renewing the intermediate or combination endorsement to the driver's license. This fee is in additional to the driver license renewal fee and if applicable, the motorcycle endorsement renewal fee.

China

WASHINGTON- After a 14 month delay, the Reagan Administration is close to a final agreement with China that would clear the way for the sale of U.S. nuclear reactors and other nuclear technology to the world's largest communist nations.

The Nuclear accord has remained as unfinished business from President Reagan's visit to China last year.

The administration hopes to have the agreement ready for a final singning when Chinese President Li Xiannian visits Washington later this month, although some officials caution more time might be needed. Li's three-day official visit begins July 22.

Richard Kennedy, U.S. ambassador-at-large, returned last week from high-level negotiation in Peking where significant progress was reported. He briefed Sen. Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) and others on Tuesday.

Congress, which could block the accord, still has to be convinced that the agreement adequately protects Amercian interests.

The agreement with China is regarded as particularly sensitive because it could generate opposite both from liberals who want ironclad assurances on non-proliferation, and conservatives, who question in the wisdom of selling American nuclear technology to a communist country.

Congress is expected to hold hearings, and the administration still could decide against approving the agreement if a bruising battle with Congress appears likely, said a State Department official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.
